THE SENIOR CLASS
1953

BEREA COLLEGE - - - BEREA, KENTUCKY

DEDICATION

Berea College Collegiate dept. Senior class Chimes.

Feeling the need for belief in the dignity of man,

Realizing that it is we who soon must test our tenets and face the consequence of their strength

Or weakness,

Struggling to free ourselves from the bonds of prejudice and the fetters of unthinking words,

Reaffirming our allegiance to the ideals upon which Berea is founded,

We dedicate this Chimes to the principles

Of human kinship,

Of mutual responsibility to, and

Of mutual respect for

The human person.

Pledging to make these affirmations more than mere platitudes,

But true expressions of ourselves and in the living of them,

Achieving a greater part of our potential being.

We Contemplate . . .

Soon the days are approaching when we can only remember, and the things that are important to us now will have become last in a medley of other things. Anyway, this is what our predecessors have told us. They say, too, that the year we started as freshmen in college was the beginning of the happiest period in our lives. And we begin to think. What, out of the debris of four years, will we remember, and why?

Will we remember most the things that we have complained about? Or will our complaints eventually seem insignificant too? If we are to consider ourselves as a typical class, will we not remember the things that those classes before us have remembered? If so, then from graduation day on will be like looking backward through a book, with each preceding page improving on the next. But we do not believe in that; we know that Berea alumni always feel something else, and we feel it too. We have learned here, and we have acquired rich friendships, but we can never cease learning or developing new friendships. We have had good times here, surely, but not as good as we will have.

The Chimes this time seeks not to combine mere nostalgic recollections, but rather to record constructively some of the experiences we have shared together in the four years (more or less) that we have "walked these hallowed halls" and "trod this sacred ground." We do not consider this a "senior" book exclusively; it is published for the student body in common, in view of our common contacts at Berea College. It is not a final statement, either. We like to think that our class, entered in '49 and graduating in '53, does not automatically throw off all the shackles of its alma mater the moment it leaves the campus. Rather, we hope that we can leave much of ourselves here, since already we realize that the spirit of Berea will never leave us. In that way, it seems that all of the "Berea family" must become constantly bigger and better with the years, through past, present, and future Berea associations.

And so this book is not the story of the present senior class alone. It is the story of every person who has thrilled in the joy of a task well done; who has willingly cast off some of the old for a better new; who has awakened to the cry of "Help" in a world that has grown impatient waiting for something good.

A conversation took place between

(Such a conversation is easy to arrange

"You see," said sixty-one, "my life has proceeded according to plan."
"Yes," said nineteen, "but you will notice it was my plan. I made those decisions when I entered the Junior year at Berea. That was the year I chose my major. And the plan you have developed and profited from was mine."

"So it was," said sixty-one, "I hadn't fully taken that into account. And come to think of it . . . you could have ruined me, couldn't you?"

We learn to tread "the Berea Way"

FRESHMEN

It's Orientation time in Berea,
In sunny (or roiny) September—
A program that's filled (I'll say it is)
With too many things to remember.

We sign up for classes and line up for meals,
And then we get tested and tested.
And then we're permitted to ossemble again,
For testing agoin when we're rested.

It's all for the good (it says in fine print),
And where there's a will there's a way.
So a person of letters some day I'll become,
With a "B" and A.B. or B.S. and O.K.!

SENIOR NURSES

We started as 'probies' in August of '50,
We learned a new lingo—P. R. and an N.
T. L. and a C., c.c., O.I.C.!
(And sometimes we say, "Oh never again!"')

To General up yonder in Cincy,
(You'd hardly believe what we sow!)
We found ourselves missing Berea
Where life is not quite so raw raw.

As seniors we're shifted around quite a bit,
From three to eleven, or eleven to seven.
And now we'll get marr—I mean a good job,
To keep the sick folks from going to heaven
(too soon).

LITERATURE

I'm looking for some place some where
Where I can be rid of my own triteness and meanness
And the more insufferable boredom of unimaginative minds.

Anybody got a chilling lake
 Hidden
 and set jewel-like
 in some distant cup of mountains
 up near the sky?
A rough-hewn cabin stuck up on skinny legs
With just room enough for a low-slung bunk,
 a radio-phono, and a low table to pile books and records and dirty socks on
 Would do fine.
! guess the rent runs pretty high
But you see
 I'm sick of rubbing elbows with myself
 every time I turn around.
Let's make a deal, mister.

Clair Hamrick

TO HORACE

Horace—on your Sabine Farm
Careless of the world's alarm
And fretful ways—

Tell me, were your homemade wines
And your firm boundary lines
Equal to heroic bays?

You didn't break your back with toil
Or even burn the midnight oil
To write immortal song:

You lived your life and wrote your verse
Calmly waiting for the hearse
(And soon it came along).

Many there are who say that I
'Will shortly meet you in the sky,
(Or down below!), friend Horace.

John Marsh

THE CHIMES

SONNET FOR A NEW MONK

Once I looked to you for joy and love,
For genius bettered still by friendship's mind;
You were the welcome cry that sang above
Unseemly warning from our common kind.
Once you claimed in me a power untried
And searched for words throughout familiar pages;
But you their very syllables denied
Despairingly, and translated for the ages.
Soon you perceived with wise-reflecting eye
The froilty of the flesh that makes it die,
And reaching for a sterner, abler might,
Your vows removed the aching part of night.
Now that you are gone I must forbear
And tell myself that I no longer care.

Jeanne Riddle

COMMUNICATION

A wordless joy coils around a heart,
And gently presses it until it cannot contain the happiness;
The beauty of the overflow becomes a song on the lips,
For someone else to hear and feel the joy
Which finds its way into that heart,
And the song continues
From heart to lip to heart.

A nameless sorrow lifts its hand,
And puts its fingers on the lips of song,
The quietness becomes a pall upon the air,
For someone else to feel and know the sadness too,
His song is stopped, a deep longing passes
From heart to lip to heart.

A sure compassion stirs the soul,
And lifts a part of it to dwell where it is needed;
The softness of it goes into another's life with hands to do its will,
For someone else to feel its strength and hope;
For grief is ended, tears dried, a smile is born.

Life is the passing
from heart to lip to heart.

Jean Dedman

THE THING

Children playing,
Their game is slaying.
Their cries come harshly to my ear.
Beastly screams rise up to sear
A summer sky.
Why? Why?
Children at war in a sunny meadow,
Each one living but to kill his fellow.
Toy guns crashing,
Toy knives slashing.
Succor for the thing that lurks in man,
Not of the soul, yet there to fan
Each spark of hate.
Inborn? Inate?
When these children, becoming mature,
Lay down toy weapons and try to endure
Without their aid.
Uncertain, afraid,
One will seek the clever passes
Through the government to the masses.
The voice will shake
The thing awake.
Then real war will be declared,
And real and terrible weapons bared,
And men will die.
Why? Why?

Larry Curry

If I were a bird and could but fly
The things I'd see would never be
The stilted cities with their timeless ditties
But the things I'd see
Would surely be
The swamp bird and the jasmine tree
In lands so far, far away
That I'd forget about Today
And work in pleasantries—and play.
Sylvia Yelton

WITH WEARINESS WE HAVE BEGUN

With weariness we have begun
A walk in empty-seeming space
Where ecstasy is seldom won
As storlight on a shadowed face.

What roads in ruin we traverse
Unfrequented by other feet;
What new galaxies we disperse
To salvage what forgotten sweet?

BEREA COLLEGE — ALMA MATER

These words will always carry memories of our campus. They will cause you to see in your mind's eye the great oaks, the beautiful maples, the daffodils, the green lawns and the buildings which house people, and classes and workshops. The words will bring to mind names and faces of friends with whom study and work and play have been shared. The words too will awaken a response in ideals and purposes carried into daily life—ideals and purposes which first became clear as part of Berea's educational offering to you.

I am happy to have shared with you this year in Berea's life. I am pleased to have this opportunity of greeting you for we are all OF BEREA COLLEGE—ALMA MATER.

The 1953 Chimes

YEARBOOK OF BEREA COLLEGE

531 COLLEGE STATION
BEREA KENTUCKY

Now that you and I can look at the 1953 "CHIMES," neatly bound in our school colors of Royal Blue and White, I would like to say that it has been a great experience; filled with much mid-night "oil," fun, and most of all an educational value that I shall cherish from now on. My hours of picture taking, developing and printing in the dark-room, and all of the other combined chores of the publication makes me feel completely at home in "The School Where Nobody Loafs."

The book, however, could not have been published by my work alone. My special recognition and thanks goes to my assistant Suzie Shriver. Her work has been most superior in more ways than I can express, and if any build up is possible now or in the future, I sincerely tip my hat to you, Suzie. Gene Hoskins has accurately recorded the business transactions (also, assisted in taking pictures); Allene Wade handled subscriptions and circulation; David Kite, Paul Clevenger and Theo Brooks used their sales ability in the advertising section; and the realism by Dr. Ross in the class poems, was perfect. The superior craftsmanship in printing was made possible at the College Press by the many overtime hours that "Pap" Adams, Edgar Johnson, "Linky" Blanton, A. D. Trusty, and "Puny" Miracle spent in completing the book. My sincere thanks go to these people, and every other person who assisted in the publication of the 1953 CHIMES.

I have thoroughly enjoyed being Editor of the '53 CHIMES and hope that it will successfully carry the memories of our alma mater.

JIM ROUSE
